Mr. Mark A. Connelly
Redacted by Requester

Dear Mr. Connelly:

This letter is in response to your correspondence, dated February 4, 2017, to the U.S. Census Bureau's Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Office. We received your request in this office on February 6, 2017, and have assigned to it tracking number DOC-CEN-2017-000556. We are responding under the FOIA to your request for the 1990 geographical boundary changes.

The portion of the website containing the requested records is currently unavailable and we are providing you copies of the requested records. Enclosed is a copy of responsive records (96 pages), which we have determined to be fully releasable to you under the FOIA. We are denying your fee waiver request because there is no charge for these records.

Please contact Latasha Hill of my staff, or Iris Boon, the FOIA Public Liaison, by telephone at 301-763-2127 or by email at census.foia@census.gov if you have any questions regarding your request.

Sincerely,

Vernon E. Curry, PMP, CIPP/G

1990s geographic change notes

Source: U.S. Bureau of the Census

Release Date: October 1997

Revised: October 20, 2000

The 1999 population estimates are based on 1990 Census population totals revised to reflect legal boundary changes reported nationwide during the 1998 Boundary and Annexation Survey. In that survey, local governments were asked to report their boundaries that were legally in effect as of January 1, 1998. For the first time since the 1990 Census, the survey included all functioning governmental units.

A geoprocessing system was developed to estimate the impact of annexations, de-annexations, or governmental mergers on the 1990 base populations. In general, increases or decreases in land area were accompanied by corresponding changes in the estimated 1990 base populations of each governmental unit. In other instances, 1990 population increases or decreases in areas with few or insignificant boundary changes reflected improvements in the geographic assignment capabilities of the Census Bureau's TIGER® System. When governmental units were merged, their respective 1990 base populations were combined. 1990 base populations also were estimated for new governmental units. The 1990 base populations of incorporated places or townships that dissolved after the 1990 Census were retained within the higher level entities in which these governmental units formerly existed. Finally, changes to governmental unit name and other geographic code identifiers were captured to enable accurate representation of these governmental units in the estimates tables.

To help users of the Population Estimates, a set of Geographic Change Notes was prepared to describe changes to the inventory or identification of governmental units or their subdivisions.

The notes are organized by state and include the following types of changes:

- Annexations and de-annexations of incorporated places across boundaries of counties and functioning minor civil divisions.
- Formation of new governmental units.
- Disincorporations, dissolutions, and disorganizations of governmental units.
- Mergers and/or consolidations of governmental units.
- Governmental units not reported in the 1990 Census that were legally in existence as of January 1, 1990 (the date used to determine reporting eligibility in the census).
- Governmental unit name changes.
- Geographic code changes (Census and FIPS [Federal Information Processing Standard]), listing the new and previous codes for a governmental unit.
- Legal/Statistical Area Description (LSAD) changes, listing the description of each governmental unit, such as a "village" becoming a "city."
- Dependency status changes, describing the relationship between an incorporated place and a functioning minor civil division or county. Places are either independent or dependent. Status changes require geographic code changes to ensure that the affected governmental units are structured into the appropriate hierarchical relationships.
- Functional status changes, specifying whether a governmental entity was activated or deactivated (some governmental units may remain legally in existence, but inactive, in which case estimates are not produced for the entity).

Direct treatment of statistical areas is excluded from these notes, with the following exceptions:

- Alaska census areas are treated as borough (county) equivalents.

- Honolulu, HI Census Designated Place is treated as an incorporated place.
- Unorganized territories located in counties with functioning MCDs are treated as MCD equivalents.

1990 Census Corrections - 1990 Census population corrections resulting from the Census Bureau's Count Question Resolution program are not included in the notes, but are available on a separate listing in the Census Bureau report, Corrected 1990 Census Population, Housing Units, and Group Quarters Counts for Governmental Units (CPH-L-157).
